Nestled along the scenic Saint John River, Fredericton serves as New Brunswick's capital, balancing urban sophistication with small-town charm. Similar to other major urban centres on the east coast of Canada, Fredericton has seen substantial population growth in the recent years, a pattern expected to persist over the next 25 years. This growth is fueled by the city's robust economy, well-established institutions, and excellent quality of life.

Ideally located in the heart of Fredericton's downtown core, 140 Carleton Street is just a short walk from a wide array of amenities, including cafes, restaurants, breweries, retail stores, and hotels. Additionally, the property enjoys excellent accessibility, being only steps away from Kings Place, a key transfer hub serving several bus routes daily.

140 Carleton occupies a high-profile location at the intersection of Brunswick and Carleton Streets in the bustling King Street District, also known as the Financial District. The immediate area is designated by the City for mixed-use infill development retrofitting of older buildings, fostering great walkability and vibrant street-level activity. This evolving landscape offers tenants unparalleled access to connectivity, amenities, and thriving business opportunities.
